E. Other Information

E.1 Latin Extended

LATIN LETTER H WITH DESCENDER, LATIN LETTER K WITH DESCENDER and LATIN LETTER Z WITH DESCENDER have been in use since at least 1966 and in active use at least until 1984. For all of these, most of the readers are still alive. They are probably in their 40s, 50s and 60s in terms of age.

The Uighur Latin Alphabet (see Figure 1) was adopted during the time of the cultural revolution, after the rift between China and the Soviet Union took place in 1961. The script seems to have been a part of language reform in China, which also attempted at one point to replace Chinese characters with the Latin “hanyu pinyin.”

Officially, the Latin script was replaced by a modified Arabic script due to pressure from Uighur cultural leaders. There was the perception on the part of Uighurs that the Latin script was making it possible for the Chinese to introduce a large number of Chinese loanwords into the Uighur written language. Arabic script was reintroduced to stem the cultural tide, and renew the Uighurs’ and other Turkic peoples ties with Islam. However, since the script was introduced in the early to mid sixties (1961? -1966) to the time it was phased out between 1984-1986, over twenty years had passed, and millions of people had been educated in Latin script, but not Arabic. The result is that there are millions of people who were literate, but now are illiterate, and disenfranchised from their linguistic and cultural heritage. The people in their 60s were educated in the old Arabic script, so the segment of the population who are illiterate in their language are in their 40s and 50s.

LATIN SMALL LETTER H WITH DESCENDER and LATIN CAPITAL LETTER H WITH DESCENDER is used by Uighur (see Figure 2 and 5-7). Phonetically, in Uighur, LATIN LETTER H WITH DESCENDER represents /h/.

LATIN SMALL LETTER K WITH DESCENDER and LATIN CAPITAL LETTER K WITH DESCENDER were used orthographically by Uighur (see Figure 2 and 5-7), Kazakh, Kirghiz, and Daur. However, note that the Chinese-Qazaq dictionary was reprinted in 2000 (see Figures 3 & 4). Phonetically, in Uighur and Qazaq LATIN LETTER K WITH DESCENDER represents /q/ (uvular stop). LATIN LETTER K WITH DESCENDER is very common. In Qazaq, among consonants, it is the second most frequently occurring letter next to Jj.

LATIN SMALL LETTER Z WITH DESCENDER and LATIN CAPITAL LETTER Z WITH DESCENDER were used orthographically by Uighur (see Figure 2 and 5) and Daur. Phonetically, LATIN LETTER Z WITH DESCENDER represents /z/. It is used for Russian loanwords, especially having to do with industrial/technical vocabulary and is infrequent in usage. Jj is often substituted for LATIN LETTER Z WITH DESCENDER.

LATIN SMALL LETTER H WITH DESCENDER and LATIN CAPITAL LETTER H WITH DESCENDER are also orthographically used for Tat (see Figure 8). They were used in the Judeo-Tat orthography in the 1920-30s; other orthographies have since been introduced that do not use this character, but the earlier orthography is still encountered.
